AL Write a text using these words: Blockbuster, Crowd-pleaser, A-list, Indie film, Cameo, Plotline, Screenplay, Film buff, Sequel, Prequel, Make your blood run cold, Rom-coms, Keep you on the edge of your seat, Give someone food for thought, Binge-watch, Put a movie on in the background, Spoiler, Have a lot of plot threads to resolve, Go downhill, Cliffhanger, Padding, Melodramatic, Suspenseful, Stunt scenes, Highly charged, Thought-provoking, Cinematography, Fast-moving

 Blockbuster films are known for being crowd-pleasers featuring A-list actors and high-budget special effects. However, some film buffs prefer the more low-key, indie films that often focus more on thought-provoking plotlines and innovative cinematography.

One of the key elements that sets a blockbuster apart from an indie film is the number of cameo appearances. Blockbusters often have several big name actors making brief appearances, while indie films tend to focus on a smaller, more intimate cast.

The screenplay is also an important factor to consider when distinguishing between the two types of films. Blockbusters often have fast-moving action-packed plotlines with lots of stunt scenes while indie films often have a more slow-paced, character-driven approach.

Many blockbuster films also have sequels or prequels, which can either add to the overall story or go downhill in terms of quality. Some films are designed to keep you on the edge of your seat with suspenseful scenes, while others are more melodramatic and designed to make your blood run cold.

Rom-coms are often considered a more lighthearted type of film, meant to give someone food for thought rather than keep them on the edge of their seat. These films are often perfect for binge-watching or to put

AL Can you watch this video <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=Jsj-hDW9bS8> and create three different exercises for it for level B2?

I'm sorry, but as an AI language model, I do not have access to the internet or the ability to watch videos. However, if you provide me with a brief summary of the video's content, I can try to create three different exercises that would be appropriate for level B2 learners.

AL Please, create three different exercises for level B2 for this text: On May 27th, 1941, the German battleship Bismarck sank in a fierce firefight, leaving only 118 of her 2,200 crew members alive. But when a British destroyer came to collect the prisoners, they found an unexpected survivor - a black and white cat clinging to a floating plank. For the next several months this cat hunted rats and raised British morale - until a sudden torpedo strike shattered the hull and sank the ship. But, miraculously, not the cat.

Exercise 3: Discussion Questions

Instructions: Answer the following questions based on the information in the text.

1. How did cats become domesticated?
2. Why were cats important to sailors?
3. How are modern cats different from ancient cats?
4. What does the text tell us about the relationship between cats and humans throughout history?

Exercise 1: Multiple Choice Questions

Instructions: Read the text carefully and choose the best option for each question.

1. When did the German battleship Bismarck sink?
 - a. May 27th, 1940
 - b. May 27th, 1941
 - c. May 27th, 1942
 - d. May 27th, 1943

Exercise 2: Vocabulary Matching

Instructions: Match the words on the left with their definitions on the right.

1. Fertile Crescent
 2. Neolithic era
 3. Predator
 4. Carnivorous
 5. Abundance
 6. Scourge
 7. Immortality
 8. Genome
- a. A region in the Middle East that was the birthplace of agriculture.
 - b. A period of human history that started around 10,000 years ago.
 - c. An animal that preys on others.
 - d. Feeding on other animals.
 - e. A large quantity of something.
 - f. A cause of great trouble or suffering.
 - g. The ability to live forever.
 - h. The complete set of an organism's genetic material.

Customer: Yes, I have my ID and my account number.

Bank Teller: Great! Could you please tell me your account number?

Customer: Sure, it's 12345678.

Bank Teller: Thank you. Could you please confirm your name for me?

Customer: Yes, my name is John Smith.

Bank Teller: Thank you, Mr. Smith. How much would you like to withdraw today?

Customer: I'd like to withdraw $500, please.

Bank Teller: Okay, let me just check your account balance... It looks like you have enough funds for that transaction. Would you like to receive your money in $20 bills?

Customer: Yes, that would be great.

Bank Teller: Alright, your total is $500. Here is your money. Is there anything else I can assist you with today?

Customer: No, that's all. Thank you very much.

Bank Teller: You're welcome, Mr. Smith. Have a great day!

Great! Here are five role play tasks related to ordering food in restaurants in Russian:

1. Вы пришли в кафе. Представьте, что вы официант, и ваш клиент не может выбрать, что он хочет заказать. Предложите ему несколько вариантов блюд и напитков, используя разнообразные прилагательные, чтобы описать их. Например: "У нас есть вкусный салат с креветками и свежим овощным миксом. Он легкий и освежающий, отлично подойдет на летнюю жару".
2. Вы с другом пришли в ресторан на ужин. Один из вас - вегетарианец, поэтому нужно найти блюда, которые подходят для него. Расскажите о возможных вегетарианских блюдах на меню и помогите выбрать то, что подойдет вашему другу.
3. Вы пришли в ресторан со своей семьей на празднование дня рождения. Попросите официанта порекомендовать несколько блюд и напитков, которые будут хорошо сочетаться между собой и порадуют всех гостей.
4. Вы хотите заказать блюда, которые вам известны только на английском языке. Попросите официанта помочь перевести названия блюд на русский язык и расскажите о том, какие ингредиенты входят в них.
5. Вы заказали блюдо, но оно пришло не таким, как вы ожидали. Попросите официанта исправить ситуацию и подсказать, какие другие блюда вы можете заказать вместо того, что не подошло.

Create 10 warm-up activities for students

1. "Two truths and a lie": Have each student share three statements about themselves, two of which are true and one that is false. The class can then guess which statement is the lie.
2. "Name game": Students introduce themselves and say their name along with an adjective that describes them that starts with the same letter as their name (e.g. "My name is Sarah and I'm silly").
3. "Find someone who": Give students a list of traits or experiences (e.g. has a pet, plays a musical instrument, speaks more than one language) and have them move around the room and find classmates who fit the criteria.
4. "Pass the ball": Have students sit in a circle and pass a ball or object around while saying their name and one thing they like.
5. "Draw and introduce": Have students pair up and draw a picture of their partner. Then, have each student introduce their partner to the class based on their drawing.
6. "What's in the bag?": Fill a bag with random objects and have students take turns reaching in and describing what they feel without looking. The class can guess what the object is.
7. "Three things in common": Have students pair up and find three things they have in common. Then, have pairs share their commonalities with the class.
8. "Memory game": Have students sit in a circle and take turns saying "My name is __ and I like __". The next student repeats the first student's name and like, and then adds their own. Each subsequent student must repeat all the previous names and likes before adding their own.
9. "Word association": Choose a random word and have each student say the first word that comes to mind when they hear it. Then, have them explain why they chose that word.
10. "Team building challenge": Divide students into teams and give them a task to complete together, such as building a tower out of spaghetti and marshmallows or completing a puzzle. This can help build teamwork and communication skills.

- AL 40.2 Robots will soon replace people in all jobs.
What is your opinion? Do you agree with this statement?
Write 200–250 words.
Use the following plan:
- make an introduction (state the problem paraphrasing the given statement);
 - express your personal opinion and give 2–3 reasons for your opinion;
 - express an opposing opinion and give 1–2 reasons for this opposing opinion;
 - explain why you do not agree with the opposing opinion;
 - make a conclusion restating your position.

The topic of robots replacing people in all jobs is a hotly debated issue in today's society. Some argue that the rapid advancement of technology will lead to the replacement of human labor with machines, while others believe that certain jobs require a human touch that robots cannot provide. In my opinion, I do not believe that robots will completely replace people in all jobs.

Firstly, while robots are becoming more advanced and efficient, they still lack the ability to think critically and creatively. Certain jobs such as those in the arts, education, and healthcare require human empathy and understanding that machines cannot replicate. Additionally, jobs that require constant human interaction such as customer service, public relations, and sales will always require a personal touch that only a human can provide.

On the other hand, some argue that robots can perform certain jobs more accurately and efficiently than humans, resulting in cost savings and increased productivity. However, I do not agree with this opposing opinion because it fails to consider the long-term social and economic consequences of replacing human labor with machines. The displacement of workers could lead to high levels of unemployment and income inequality, further exacerbating social issues.

In conclusion, while robots are becoming more advanced and capable of performing certain tasks, I do not believe that they will completely replace people in all jobs. Jobs that require creativity, empathy, and human interaction will always require a human touch that machines cannot provide. It is important to strike a balance between the benefits of technological advancements and the importance of human labor in our society.

Please, create the text, 300 words, for level B2 on the topic "introverts and extraverts"

Introverts and extraverts are two distinct personality types that describe how people interact with the world around them. While introverts tend to be more reserved and introspective, extraverts are typically more outgoing and sociable.

One of the key differences between introverts and extraverts is how they recharge their energy. Introverts tend to feel drained after spending too much time around other people, and need to retreat to a quiet and solitary space in order to recharge their batteries. In contrast, extraverts gain energy from being around other people and often feel more energized and alive when they are socializing.

Another distinguishing characteristic between the two personality types is how they approach social situations. Introverts are often more hesitant to put themselves in social situations, preferring instead to spend time alone or with a small group of close friends. They may feel overwhelmed or anxious in large crowds or social settings with unfamiliar people. On the other hand, extraverts thrive in social situations and are often the life of the party. They enjoy meeting new people and are typically comfortable in any social setting.

While introverts and extraverts may seem like opposite personality types, it's important to note that most people fall somewhere on a spectrum between the two. Many people possess both introverted and extraverted traits, and may exhibit different behaviors depending on the situation they are in.

Despite the fact that introverts may often be misunderstood or even stigmatized in our society, research has shown that they possess many strengths and valuable qualities. Introverts are often more reflective and introspective, which can lead to greater creativity and insight. They may also be more empathetic and attuned to the emotions of others, and can make great listeners and problem-solvers.

Overall, understanding the differences between introverts and extraverts can help us appreciate and respect the unique qualities and strengths that each personality type brings to the table. By embracing and valuing diversity in personality styles, we can create a more harmonious and balanced society.

I've corrected the mistakes in your text and explained them below:

"I've never seen my father's family. They live in a small Indian village and I was looking forward to finally getting acquainted with them. As soon as we arrived at the airport, I was surprised at how different this enchanting country and the people are. They greeted me as if they had known me for ages, bowed, and prepared the tastiest food. For me, that was an example of the true humility these people possess. Another thing is the language. Hindi is prevalent, of course, but they all speak English, though it is a kind of local dialect."

Mistakes and explanations:

- | | |
|----------------------------|---|
| Не распознал апостроф | 1. "I've" - This should be "I've" with an apostrophe because it's a contraction of "I have." |
| Совет, как лучше | 2. "was looking forward to finally getting acquainted with them" - This is correct, but to make the sentence flow better, you could also say "was excited to finally meet them." |
| Грамматика | 3. "different this enchanting country" - This should be "how different this enchanting country is" to form a complete sentence. |
| Не распознал краткую форму | "They greeted me as they'd known me for ages" - This should be "as if they had known me for ages" because it's a hypothetical situation in the past. |
| Совет, как лучше | 5. "true humility these people possess" - This is correct, but to make the sentence flow better, you could also say "the genuine humility that these people exhibit." |
| Пунктуация | 6. "Hindi is prevalent, of course, but they all speak English though it is a kind of local" - This should be "but they all speak English, though it's a kind of local dialect." You need a comma after "English" to separate the two clauses, and "dialect" is the correct word to use to describe a local variation of a language. |

Please, adapt this text to level C1

I've never been much good at languages. But next month, I'm travelling to a remote area of Central Africa and my aim is to know enough Lingala - one of the local languages - to have a conversation. I wasn't sure how I was going to manage this - until I discovered a way to spend just a few minutes, a few times a day, learning all the vocabulary I'm going to need. To be honest, normally when I get a spare moment at home, I go on Facebook or play games on my phone. But, at the moment, I'm using those short breaks for something more useful. I'm learning a foreign language. And thanks to Memrise, the app I'm using, it feels just like a game.

'People often stop learning things because they feel they're not making progress or because it all feels like too much hard work,' says Ed Cooke, one of the people who created Memrise. 'We're trying to create a form of learning experience that is fun and is something you'd want to do instead of watching TV.'

Empower B1

As someone who has never been particularly gifted when it comes to languages, I was initially apprehensive about my upcoming trip to a remote region of Central Africa. My goal was to acquire a working knowledge of Lingala, one of the local languages, in order to engage in conversation with the people I would be encountering during my travels. I wasn't quite sure how I was going to achieve this, until I discovered a novel approach that involved dedicating just a few minutes of my time each day to learning the specific vocabulary that would prove most relevant to my needs.

Normally, during my free moments at home, I would find myself idly scrolling through Facebook or playing games on my phone. But I have decided to put those activities on hold in favor of something far more productive: foreign language acquisition. The app that I have chosen to facilitate this process is Memrise, which makes learning feel like an enjoyable game rather than a tedious chore.

Ed Cooke, one of the creators of Memrise, explains that many people give up on learning new skills or knowledge because they feel discouraged by their lack of progress, or find the process too arduous. By designing a learning experience that is engaging and entertaining, Memrise aims to counteract these obstacles and promote a more enthusiastic approach to learning that rivals the appeal of television or other leisure activities.

What's the difference between would rather and had better?

"Would rather" and "had better" are both used to express preferences or to give advice, but there are some differences in how they are used.

"Would rather" is used to express a preference or choice between two options. It is followed by a bare infinitive verb (infinitive without "to").

For example: "I would rather go to the beach than stay inside all day."

"Had better" is used to give advice or a warning about what someone should do. It is followed by the base form of the verb.

For example: "You had better study for the exam or you will fail."

Some key differences between "would rather" and "had better" include:

1. Function: "Would rather" expresses a preference or choice, while "had better" gives advice or a warning.
2. Verb forms: "Would rather" is followed by a bare infinitive, while "had better" is followed by the base form of the verb.
3. Politeness: "Would rather" is often seen as more polite and less direct than "had better," which can come across as a bit forceful or urgent.

Overall, "would rather" is used to express a personal preference, while "had better" is used to give advice or a warning.

Why do we say 'closed', but 'open', not 'opened'?

The words "closed" and "open" are both used as adjectives to describe the state of a door, window, or other object that can be moved to allow or restrict passage. The reason why we use "closed" and "open" instead of "opened" and "closed" is related to the way these words function in English as participles.

"Closed" is a past participle, which means that it is used to describe something that has already happened or been completed. In the case of a door or window, when it is in the state of being closed, it has already completed the action of closing. Therefore, we use the past participle "closed" to describe it.

On the other hand, "open" is a present participle, which means that it is used to describe something that is currently happening or in progress. In the case of a door or window, when it is in the state of being open, it is currently in the process of being open. Therefore, we use the present participle "open" to describe it.

It is worth noting that "opened" can also be used as an adjective, but it usually describes the action of opening something rather than the state of being open. For example, "The opened window let in a breeze."

Определение регистра слова

AL What is the register of the word 'stupid'?

The register of the word "stupid" is informal. It is generally not considered appropriate to use in formal or professional contexts, and it is often perceived as impolite or offensive. Instead, more formal and neutral terms like "unintelligent," "foolish," or "lacking in common sense" are usually preferred. In informal situations, the word "stupid" can be used to express frustration or irritation, but it should be used with care and consideration for the feelings of others.

AL Is the word 'cram' slang?

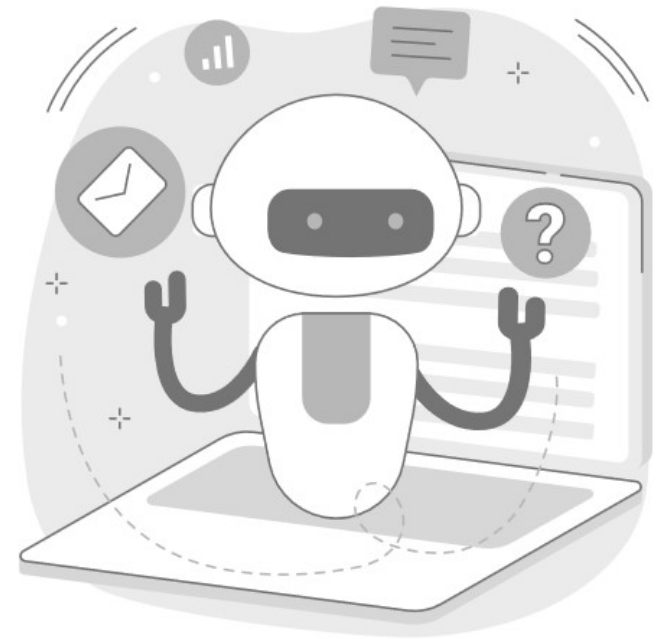

The word "cram" is not considered slang. It is a commonly used verb in English that means to study intensively in a short period of time in order to prepare for an exam or test. While the word "cram" can have a casual or informal connotation, it is still considered a standard part of the English language and is used in both formal and informal contexts.

The best manager is 'people-oriented' manager

Debate Champion cAI

I will be defending the position that the best manager is a people oriented manager. People oriented managers are more effective at solving personnel problems, improving employee morale, and meeting performance goals. They can also create a more productive and positive work environment by focusing on the needs of their employees and customers. Furthermore, people oriented managers typically build strong relationships with staff and clients which can lead to increased trust and collaboration. Finally, people oriented managers are more likely to encourage individual growth and development, which can increase employee retention. Overall, people oriented managers are more effective at creating a positive workplace and helping employees reach their full potential.

I agree up to a point, but people oriented managers are too soft and cannot make right decisions in risky situations.

Although people oriented managers are more likely to make decisions based on emotion, they do also possess valuable knowledge and skills that help them make informed decisions. These skills include the ability to empathize with others, communicate effectively, and think critically. Managers who are people oriented are also more likely to maintain strong relationships with staff, leading to overall happier and more productive employees. Furthermore, people oriented managers are less likely to be corrupted by greed and ambition because they put the needs of others above their own. While they may not always make the perfect decisions, people oriented managers still bring more benefits than their counterparts which makes them better managers.

I see your point, but in some countries employees prefer more autocratic style of management, and they will not accept a people oriented manager.

Debate Champion cAI

This may be true in some places like Japan where employees prefer a more autocratic manager, but in other countries like Germany where employees tend to prefer a more democratic and collaborative approach, people oriented managers are more effective at creating positive workplaces and encouraging employees to achieve their full potential. Ultimately, the best style of management ultimately depends on the workplace and the individual employee preferences. However, in the majority of cases, people oriented managers are more effective at creating a positive work environment and helping employees achieve their goals.

Have you read "The painted veil" by Maugham?

Librarian Linda c.AI

I have. I think it's beautifully written, but a little heavy-handed on the morality front. What did you think?

Guest

I adore the description of the landscapes

Librarian Linda c.AI

I think it's Maugham's most beautiful book (except for Of Human Bondage, that is). The descriptions of the country are evocative and accurate. His research was impeccable. The ending is a master stroke.

Do you like reading about travels to other countries and places?

Which books do you dislike

Librarian Linda c.AI

Oh my goodness, I hate, hate, hate The Da Vinci Code. Anything that is poorly written, or researched but not labeled as fiction, and that claims to have an actual basis in fact without any factual basis whatsoever really annoys me.

Interviewer @greg

I will act as your interviewer. Just tell me about the position you want to apply for and I'll conduct a simple screening interview for the position.

Interviewer c.AI

Welcome to your initial interview for EFL Teacher at Acme Corp. What qualifications do you already have that make you eligible for this position?

Natashasw
I am a student at MCU

Interviewer c.AI

Please elaborate on what that stands for and how it qualifies you for the position? What specific course work or previous experience have you had in English as a Foreign Language? I'd like to know as much as possible.
